Harris Creek Elementary is “For the Birds”!

In response to a serious two-year drought, CLH Design worked with Harris Creek Elementary staff and students to create a bird/butterfly habitat throughout the new campus as a way for students, staff and the community to “adopt” this new school.

Students became involved before the actual day of installation by learning about birds and butterflies, their habitats, etc., during class. Each grade level was responsible for a certain element of the overall project, including constructing habitats, planting native food supplies, building shelters, and creating observation areas. Even the community became involved as members of the local North Carolina National Guard Battalion 252 joined the fun.
